Findings:

General: Based on Interview, it has been confirmed that a child was fed the wrong bottle. Two staff, the facility director, and the mother of the child confirmed that the bottle of breast milk used in the feeding did not belong to the child in which it was fed. This feeding was conducted by two different staff, meaning that the bottle passed through two different sets of hands without the error being identified until the feeding was completed. The bottle was correctly labeled with the correct name of the child in which it belonged to. The wrong bottle was selected from the refrigerator in error and used for the feeding.
