Findings:

General: Based on Interview, and review of documentation, an eight (8) month old infant was fed the wrong bottle on 8/24/15 at approximately 10:30 a.m. According to interviews, the infant was fed a three (3) ounce bottle of breast milk instead of an eight (8) ounce bottle of formula. This occurred as a staff person came into the infant classroom to give another staff person a lunch break. According to the facility's policy, breast milk bottles are identified by using a red label along with the child's name. Staff stated that the red label had come off of the bottle that day. It is important to note that deficiencies were issued for a similiar incident that occurred on 2/18/14. Since this second occurrence, a new bottle feeding procedure has been put into action and staff have been retrained.
