Findings:

General: Based on Review of Documentation, and interviews the child care center director failed to assure the health safety and comfort of a child by not intervening when a child banged his head against a wall and not applying first aid to an injury. Review of documentation revealed a behavior/incident report for a two-year-old (ED: 2/23/15) dated for 6/2/15 with a time of 9:30am. The report states the aforementioned child was banging his head and was taken out in the hallway by a staff member. Continued review of documentation revealed the child was returned to the classroom and sat against a wall and banged his head again. Interviews with staff members revealed the aforementioned child banged the back of his head against a wall and was removed from the wall and that the child got up and sat against another wall and banged his head again. Further interviews revealed the child was having a temper tantrum which also involved rolling on the floor, kicking his shoes off, screaming, and crying. Based on interviews the temper tantrum lasted approximately ten (10) minutes without any sufficient intervention to prevent the child from injuring himself. Interview with a staff member (DOH: 7/29/14) revealed she noticed red areas on the back of the aforementioned child's head and that she did not apply any kind of first aid to his head. Interview with the child's mother revealed she noticed red bruising on the back of her child's head and bruising on one of his ears on the day of the incident when she picked him up around 2:15pm. Continued interview with the aforementioned child's mother revealed her child received medical treatment for his bruising on the day (6/2/15) of the incident. Interview with medical staff revealed the ear bruising the child sustained is highly concerning.
